Reasons For Studying This Book

This book addresses the power of the imagination and how it enhances playtime, but sometimes can lead to tricky situations. Janet Reid has created a likeable and relatable character, Toby, whose troubles school children will identify with. Toby means well, but his impulsivity and imagination often get him into trouble. Readers follow Toby's journey as he learns to be mindful of others and care for his school mates. This book is particularly helpful in teaching discipline, mindfulness and awareness.

Questions and Reflections

Have the teacher read the book out in class, making sure everyone can see the illustrations. Alternatively, students can take turns at reading pages aloud.

Pre-reading Questions

1. Before reading, discuss the front cover. What might the book be about? Who is the author and illustrator? What type of story do you think it will be? i.e. Funny? Serious?
2. Discuss the back cover and blurb. What does the blurb tell you about the subject of the book? Does it match the clues you found on the front cover?
3. What sort of trouble do you think Toby might be in?

Post-reading Questions

1. Discuss the characteristics of a good story. i.e. What is the plot? Who is the central character? What is the conflict/problem in the story? How is that problem solved (resolution)?
2. Toby wants a pet more than anything else, but he must stay out of trouble. Have you ever had a goal? How did you go about achieving it?
3. Toby has trouble staying out of trouble. Why do you think that is? Is he doing something 'wrong'?
4. Do you ever find it hard to stay out of trouble? Why? How might you go about staying out of trouble?
5. Every school has rules to make sure the students are safe and happy. Can you think of 3 rules that are important at your school? Do you have trouble following them? Why/why not?
6. Toby and Sam go on wild adventures in their lunchtimes. Where have you gone on your lunchtimes? i.e. to the Wild West, jungle, skies. What props did you use to take you there?
7. Look up the meaning of the word 'impulsive'. When have you been impulsive at school?
8. When might the 'wrong' thing to do, also be the 'right' thing? Are there any incidents of this in the book?
9. A girl in Darwin has a pet scorpion. Do you know anyone with an unusual pet?
10. What characteristics do you think a good pet owner has? Do you think Toby has these?

Classroom Activities

Social Science

- Toby is trying to stay out of trouble. Students can practise visualisation by imagining they have to do something hard, and then picturing themselves completing this task or receiving the result they want. How do they feel at the start, versus after they have imagined themselves succeeding?

English

- Write down all the adjectives used to describe Miss Mott. What do they teach us about the character?
- Have students come up with a list of interview questions for Toby. They can then take turns being the interviewer and the interviewee in a roleplay.

Visual Art

- Look at Amanda Francey's illustrations. She masterfully combines Toby's imagination with reality. Think of something you do at lunchtime (i.e. playing soccer, eating food). Illustrate that activity, but add an element of the imagination. For example, look at the image below. Toby is playing in the sandpit, but also imagining he is a pirate.

Trouble For Toby Teacher's Notes can be used in schools (independent learning, small groups, and whole classes); at home with caregivers; and as part of mental health support programs facilitated by counsellors, psychologists, children's charities, etc.
